Go green in Mumbai this year

By Jeremy | October 19, 2010 | Leave a comment | Like

Saving the planet is a growing interest for many people and heading off to India on the cheapest flights to Mumbai this month could well be the perfect trip for many an eco-warrior.

All we know is that The Vishwa Show 2010, taking place between October 29th and 31st, is a three-day festival and exhibition that will allow companies and other bodies to interact with the general public and demonstrate their green thinking for all those keen to learn more.

According to the organisers, the idea of the scheme is to "go beyond bringing together those who are already involved in working for a green tomorrow and reach out to interested and concerned citizens" with a view to enlightening them as to how they can become a part of the eco process.

Initiatives enacted by the body, which could be perfect for anyone getting off cheap flights to Mumbai, include creating water reservoirs, solar lamp posts installation, rain water-harvesting, recycling activities, the promotion of eco-friendly products and goods, and facilitating electronic waste recycling.
